

Breathing Practices

When you bring your awareness to your breathing experience, it creates a powerful mind-body partnership in a few seconds. As you find something in your body that represents fatigue, stress, or tension, gently explore its edges.

1. Soft Belly Breathing: Place hand on diaphragm – just above the belly button. Inhale, and press down gently. Exhale, and let it go.
(Or... Inhale, feel the hand rise. Exhale, feel the hand fall as you let go.)
2. Calming Breath: Place hand on diaphragm and hand on chest. Inhale, and fill area under bottom hand, then fill under upper hand. Exhale, and let it all go.
3. 4-Part Breathing: Place hand on belly. Inhale, hold. Exhale, hold.
4. Circular Breathing: Notice which side of your body feels more comfortable and which side feels less comfortable – side-to-side, front-to-back, top-to-bottom, or a part or region. Inhale up the side that is more comfortable, and exhale down the side that is less comfortable. Feel the breath cross over. Examples:
Inhale up the right side of your body, and exhale down the left side of your body.
Inhale up both sides of the body, and exhale down the center core.
5. Pendulum Breath: Find an area of stress or tension in your body. Find a part of the body that feels or seems furthest away from the stress/tension, or the most different. Inhale into the relative comfort. As you exhale, focus on the area of stress/tension/discomfort and let it all go.
6. Purifying Breath: Imagine around you is an energy field. Be aware of that energy surrounding your body, just beyond your skin. Notice what the quality of the energy is – its color, light, healing presence, hear a sound, a vibration. As you inhale, some of that healing energy comes in to your body. Each time you inhale, bring a little more of that healing energy into your body. As you exhale, send that healing energy somewhere needed in your body.

Bring awareness through your body and notice any changes in the fatigue, stress, or tension. Gently explore these sensations.

~ Adapted from practices by Maggie Phillips, Ph.D., author of Reversing Chronic Pain ~

Breath Practice CDs

Breathing practice directs and regulates the breath, thus directly affecting your life force energy. Practices explore inhalation, exhalation, and retention of the breath. As you learn to steady, relax, and extend the breath, the respiratory system is strengthened, the nervous system soothed, and the mind becomes more focused and clear.

Note: Always breathe in ways that communicates ease, comfort and wellbeing. Deeply relax your body and take resting breaths between cycles whenever necessary, as you explore new ways of breathing. Begin with short practice sessions, and increase as you integrate and feel more at ease with the practices.

Quantum Light Breath

A dynamic and transformative guided breathing meditation that explores the healing power of the breath, combined with the deep vibrational sounds of the didgeridoo, harmonium, Tibetan bells and bowls, and other instruments.

Quantum Light Breath: Dynamic Breath Meditation, by the Quantum Light Breath Orchestra
Available at www.quantumlightbreath.com.

Breath Sounds Breathing Tapes

Guided practice to pace your breathing to measured pieces of music in order to re-establish a more relaxed breathing pattern free from mind activity, and supporting deeper relaxation. Helps to change the habitual pattern of under-breathing, so familiar in our stressed society.

Each tape is 30 minutes per side and has a 4 minute instruction on side A to get you started. The steady rhythm of music measures are played on the lowest volume as a guide only for practicing breath control. If you are new to regulating your breath, begin with Pattern 3 (Inhale 6, Exhale 6) or Pattern 1 (Inhale 6, Hold 3, Exhale 12, Hold 3).

Breath Sounds: Measured Music for Breathing, by Sandra Summerfield-Kozak
Available through www.internationalyogastudies.com.

Pranayama: The Art of Breathing

A 2-CD set that guides you through a 6-12 month practice for students new to exploring the breath. Pranayama, an ancient technique that was developed in India many thousands of years ago, is a practice of directing and regulating the breath, thus directly affecting your life force energy. This guided practice can help you to enhance vital energy to become centered, and to focus the mind.

Pranayama: The Art of Breathing, Felicity Green
Available through www.felicityyoga.com.